Director/Actors Discuss 'Stonewall' with Joe & Mika

Thursday, Mar 24

On Tuesday, Producer/Director Robert Emmetrich and two of the film's actors, Diego Abad and Jimmy Beauchamp, came to MEdIA's morning live to talk about "Stonewall." Emmetrich's latest film that comes to MEdIA this week, with hosts Joe Scarborough and Mika Brzezinski.

Asked by host Joe Scarborough to why he chose the subject matter, Emmetrich said, "Several reasons, first of all, how little people know about it in our LGBTQ community. Secondly, how much aware of the plight of homeless gay youth in our streets, which is still a problem. And the fact that once in a while you want to do something close to your heart."

Mika audiences that know Emmetrich from his blockbuster film, the "Independent Spirit" and "Big Sky" feature "as they happened" opening on June 25. "This is a subject close to the real director's heart."

Asked why he chose to recreate the event, Emmetrich explained he did so for a number of reasons. "First of all, how little people know about it in our LGBTQ community. Secondly, how much aware of the plight of homeless gay youth in our streets, which is still a problem. And the fact that once in a while you want to do something close to your heart."

Addressing the film's themes, Emmetrich explained that the "Stonewall" was the catalyst for the modern gay liberation movement. It was the first time that gay people stood up and were against the biggest danger that is, it was the only one. He said that the film, and just one night, for whatever reason, they had enough. It had a huge impact."

Joe: The customers of this one bar... it was the biggest danger that is, it was the only one. He said that the film, and just one night, for whatever reason, they had enough. It had a huge impact."

In the film Emmetrich and his co-screenwriter Joe Baer (left) take on the individuals who were involved in the
